

Is overseas solar container agent a scam

Overview

Beware of misleading social media ads and sales pitches promising "free" solar, guaranteed savings, or special government payouts—these are major red flags. If you are looking to purchase a shipping container, watch out for the so-called "Sea Can Scam. Buyers think they're saving money on storage solutions, only to find out all they're doing is paying for something they'll never receive. Shipping containers are in high demand across the globe, and this has led to a rise in container scams, where scammers take advantage of buyers searching for good deals online. This story has been repeated worldwide, from Australia to the Czech Republic and the United Kingdom. As solar energy adoption grew, dishonest companies exploited incentives, tax credits, and financing programs.
